Aon Insurance for Expatriates

Confused with insurance in France?...

- Languages and cultures vary amongst different countries. So do insurance regulations.
- In fact, being properly insured can be quite challenging for foreigner nationals, especially if they are not aware of local requirements.
- In France, you may be surprised to find how much insurance coverage is made mandatory by traffic regulations, your landlord, and even your child's school.

...We have the answers!

- Aon Insurance for Expatriates is a unique service designed exclusively for individuals and their families living in France.
- English-speaking insurance professionals are ready to answer your questions, explain insurance requirements specific to France, and review the benefits and features of our personal insurance products.

Whether you are a homeowner or a tenant, our Home Insurance liability covers you for damages due to bodily injury to others for up to € 4.5 million.

Questions frequently asked by our customers

Do I really need Tenants Insurance?

Yes, in France, all tenants are required to have coverage for water damage, fire and liability; Aon's package policy also covers theft of contents and valuables. Landlords usually demand a certificate of insurance before you move in, and for each subsequent year.

What should I do in case of a car accident?

If you are involved in a car accident, simply call us. We handle all the details and settle the claim on your behalf.

What should I do in case of a water leakage?

With Aon, there is no need to begin a long and complicated process that involves negotiating with adjusters and contractors. Through our network of specialists, repairs to your home will be hassle-free.

Can you provide Health Insurance?

Our Health Insurance coverage is specifically designed for expatriates, whatever the duration of your stay and status with regards to the French national health plan.
